Marcus Davis was well known in the UFC for his numerous "Fight of the Night" efforts where he'd go out there and take a lot of damage while throwing nothing but haymakers in an attempt to decapitate his enemy. I can understand why he thought of making the transition into Kickboxing, honestly, but it is a whole different world. Davis, a former professional Boxer, is no stranger to stand up fighting, obviously, but was not quite prepared for what he was going into this weekend in Ireland. I think it's time we give more credit to the MMA fighters who have been able to switch to Kickboxing and see a modicum of success.
